

ABSTRACT

A tide clock that utilizes global positioning system data to calculate tidal events. The tide clock includes a receiver that receives global positioning data describing the clock's position, and a memory having algorithms selectable to 5 calculate the time of a tidal event for multiple locations.